Notes for Brooke
- The visual tone of the site is more eccentric than I anticipated so I would like the color palette to be changed to a more standard palette like a black background and white text, but you could preserve a current color (like the yellow) as a spot color.
- Maybe introduce a second typeface to contrast the serif font. I think it would be easier on the eyes if the body copy wasn't in a high contrast typeface.
- The site needs more image size variation, since I was aiming for the site to really highlight Wes Anderson's cinematic world. I would try making main images bleed off or fade into the background if possible.
- For the main page, since all of the images are currently for one film, maybe vary different film stills from different movies and maybe grid them in 2 columns? It's up to you but I would like for the images to be larger for this page as well. This would also be cool if it ends up being a scroll view.
