What Works:

- The navigation when I enter the site is clear and easy to read!
- The images against the black background make the focus clear.
- I like the change to the typefaces! The sans serif is really nice and is a good contrast to the serif font.
- I'm liking where this is heading!

Improvements:

- I know that this is still in development, but I would like to have some text from the Wikipedia page. This can work in simple paragraphs!
- I would also like more images for the movie pages so the user can see more film stills of each movie; they can be just stacked on one another.
- The navigation from the landing page to the site pages is currently one way. Maybe have it so that when the user clicks on the title (Wes Anderson), it leads back to the landing page.
- Also is there another landing page after I click on the "Enter" button? I'm curious to see what would be here since the image isn't working.
 - o Also, the "Enter" text is hard to see so you could change it to a darker color like black.
- I would try and make all of the image sizes for the film stills consistent.
